12-Story Anderson Building
on Broadway in Deal
for A. R. Peacock's House
Occupying Square Block

The fourteen-story Anderson Building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Twelfth Street, owned by Frederick Brown, has figured in an exchange for Pittsburgh property. The structure covers a plot 132x120x100 irregular, containing approximately 8,400 square feet on a floor.

In exchange, Mr. Brown took "Rowland" Anderson's house, a palatial home in Pittsburgh, containing forty-one rooms and ten baths, covering the entire square block bounded by North Highland Avenue, Jackson Street, West Valley Avenue and Park Street. In addition to this Mr. Peacock gave a plot of 210 feet on Park Street, including garage.

The Pittsburgh property cost considerably over $1,000,000. It is said, and is free and clear. Frederick Zittell & Sons; Vreeland-Ord Company and Harvey B. Nevin were the brokers. Seller, Rolston & Blane, acted as attorneys for Mr. Peacock, and Julius H. Zieser represented Mr. Brown.
